WITH THE HONOLULU BOY SCOUTS

Now that the summer vacation is over and school has begun once more, the Boy Scouts of Honolulu are becoming active again, and the different patrols about the city are getting organized and initiating new members for the coming year.

Perhaps the oldest patrol in the city is the Honolulu First, known as the old Hitchcock patrol, under the direction of Scoutmaster George Potter and Assistant Scoutmaster Reginald Carter. This patrol consists of three troops of six scouts each, and are named after Hawaiian birds—Kolea, Au Kuu, and Elepaio. Hawaiian wildcraft, camping, and camp cooking are among the principal studies that have been taken up by this patrol, but they have not had very much instruction along the lines of life-saving or first-aid. These, however, are now being taken up in a thorough manner under the instruction of the scoutmasters.

The Honolulu First patrol has already learned all there is to know in the rescue of drowning persons and is only now waiting for a chance to make a rescue. The boys living in the more congested part of the city will undertake scout firemanhood under the direction of the fire commissioner. This will include the rescue of people from the windows of burning buildings by the old method of catching them in a blanket, the breeches buoy, and the makeshift ladder. A part of the patrol has been detailed to make a study of panic possibilities in the various theaters of the city. They will know all the exits, and quick ways of opening all the doors of the theaters, however small. They have also been taught, and are now practicing, the Baden-Powell panic prevention called "scrum." This consists of a living fence made with boys and ash staves.

First-Aid Work.

Another part of the troop will undertake first-aid in reference to accidents due to electricity, such as the live wire and the static shock.

During all this routine of instruction all will be expected to follow the scout law and from time to time will play the scout games so attractive to boys, namely "Flag Raising," "Scout Meet Scout," "Smuggling Over the Border," and a game of local invention called "Kamehameha's Bones."

In speaking of the work and play that the scouts will indulge in during the coming year, Scout Commissioner James Wilder made the following statement:

"We have planned night matches, temporary and permanent camps, cooking and fire contests, the usual athletic meets, and some aquatic games never tried here before, such as 'The Whale Hunt,' a game invented by Ernest Thompson-Seton, the well-known author and authority on scouting."

"For some time past we have been in constant communication with the scout headquarters in New York, who as the 'enthusiastic pioneers in the crossroads of the Pacific.' By a curious set of circumstances we are in communication with our English cousins, and have been asked to correspond with different troops in England bearing the letter 'H'; troops in such cities as Huntington and Hull. The last report of our work was printed in a leading English gazette, and will probably be copied by the German and French papers."

Instructor on Birds Proves Popular.

Charles W. Miller, instructor in the Washington Institute for the Study of Bird Life in Shawnee-on-Deleware, Pa., has found the Boy Scouts a great help to him in his work. The Boy Scouts in turn have derived tremendous benefit by having such a man as Miller as their scoutmaster. Miller takes the boys on hikes and teaches them the habits of the birds which the boys see. He, however, is so well trained in birdcraft that he knows the song of every bird. Accordingly whenever the boys sit down to rest, he interprets the song of every bird in hearing distance. The boys have taken enthusiastically to the study of bird life and they also are caring for the birds by looking out for the wounded and providing feeding places for the birds in the winter time. Scoutmaster Miller also has encouraged the boys in the crusade against flies, mosquitoes, sparrows, rats and mice. He also has helped them to do useful work in fighting the chestnut tree blight.

Boy Scouts of America Not Buying Rifles.

Through a misunderstanding of the activities of the Boy Scouts of America as distinguished from the American Boy Scouts, another cry against the scout movement has risen because of the fact that the leaders of the American Boy Scouts are urging their boys to buy rifles. The leaders of the Boy Scouts of America are utterly opposed to the use of firearms and are doing everything possible to discourage boys from carrying them, even forbidding a member of the Boy Scouts of America to carry a rifle when wearing a scout uniform. When this situation was called to his attention, James E. West, chief scout executive of the Boy Scouts of America, said: "As a matter of fact, the American Boy Scouts have at no time made any claim that they are not military in character. Their work is distinctly military and it is for this reason that it is unfair for them to call themselves a Scout organization because General Baden-Powell and others interested in promoting the Scout movement have consistently forbidden the introduction of military training in connection with the Scout idea. We absolutely forbid the use of arms as part of the equipment of the Boy Scout of America and are conscientiously doing all we can to promote an organization non-military in character, which will serve to develop the character of our boys and in reality strengthen the peace movement the world over."

What the Boy Scouts Are Doing.
The boy scouts of Toledo, Ohio, have been asked by the members of the Civic Federation to help in keeping the streets clean.

Scouts Roy Hamer, George Beck, Cyril Bingham, Howard Revore and Webster Lindsay of Ogden, Utah, who were attending the Chautauqua in Klamath Falls assisted the firemen recently by carrying in hose and putting out a fire in the Klamath Dye Works.

In view of the danger of infection through rats, the health officer of Galveston, Texas, has asked the boy scouts of that city to help him in killing the rats. Dr. C. W. Truhart, health officer of Galveston, has appealed to the scouts to enlist in the crusade against rats. The boys get 10c for every rat they take to the city incinerator.

A "LIVING TOWER"

What is known as the "Living Tower," says a writer in the Wide World Magazine, stands on the very summit of a hill more than 200 feet high at Camp Meeker, a summer resort in Sonoma county, Cal. It was Captain Meeker, an old pioneer, who first conceived the idea of constructing this remarkable tower. Captain Meeker conceived the plan of building a tower on the very summit of a high hill near his hotel, and while looking around one day for a suitable site he found four young redwood trees standing about twelve feet apart, representing a perfect square. Then the idea suddenly came to him to build a "living tower." The trees were each about 150 feet high. Fifty feet of each top was lopped off, and the work of building six stories was then commenced. From top to bottom the "Living Tower" is 100 feet high. Each floor is about twelve by twelve feet, and rests on strong timbers, the ends of which are securely attached to the four trees by means of steel cables and bolts. So strongly was every part braced that the whole structure does not move as much as one would naturally suppose, even when rocked by heavy winds. The tower has been carefully examined by builders and engineers, and pronounced perfectly safe. In the working out of the plan, the branches growing on the inside of the square, and the trees were not chopped, mutilated, or weakened in any way, but could possibly be avoided. Leading up from each story are broad stairways, so that one may ascend and descend with ease and perfect safety, while around the edge of each floor are strong railings to prevent accidents. Since this tower was completed, the trees have grown and flourished just as well as before. As time goes on, this very unique lookout observatory will become literally embowered in foliage. This "Living Tower" is said to be the only one of its kind in the world.
